300 brave rain in 50-mile hike-run

WILLIAMSPORT, Md. - A fitness center manager from Pennsylvania, running in his sixth ultramarathon this year, led a pack of 300 people yesterday to win the 26th annual John F. Kennedy 50-Mile Hike-Run over a rugged, rain-slicked course.

Chris M. Gibson, 35, an exercise physiologist from Pittsburgh who experiments with training methods, complained of only minor ailments after fininishing the race in 6:31.06. He said near-freezing temperatures sapped his energy and slowed his pacę.

"My left calf muscle is tight. Other than that, I feel good," Gibson said after the race, which is considered the oldest, continuous ultramarathon in the United States. "My shoes are soaked."

David Horton, 38, a physical education professor at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va., who threatened the leader during the last four miles, crossed the finish line about a minute after Gibson.

"With four miles to go, I thought I was going to (catch him)," said Horton, whose pale legs were pink and chapped from exposure. "Within the last mile I realized I wasn't going to."

Buzz Sawyer, 60, of Hagerstown, who founded the event in 1963, said 301 people started the race at 7 a.m. in Boonsboro. The temperature was 41 at the start, but fell into the 30s in the afternoon. Rain and hail drenched the runners.

The race starts with a three-mile warmup on paved streets. Racers then begin an 1,190-foot ascent up South Mountain. After 12.7 miles on the Appalachian Trail, participants face 26.2 miles, a normal marathon, on the pancake-flat Chesapeake & Ohio towpath, which winds along the Potomac River. The last 8.3 miles are on flat and hilly roads in Washington County.

Sawyer's prediction a day earlier that none of the top competitors would set a record came true, with the grueling conditions keeping the winner 37 minutes off the course record.

The record is held by Mike Spinnler, 30, of Hagerstown, who completed the 50.2-mile course in 1982 in 5:53.05.

"I took two pretty good falls in the mountains," Spinnler said, examining bruises and bloody scraps on his thigh. "Any time I get out of the mountains without bleeding too bad, I say, 'Now it's time to race.''

This year, Spinnler finished about 21 minutes behind Gibson, who ran his first ultramarathon at age 29 in 1982.

Gibson, a Baltimore native, said he planned to rest until Thanksgiv. ing Day when he will run a much shorter course - only five miles with one of his brothers in Alexandria, Va.

"This is my last ultra for a while." he said. "Now comes time to let the body rest."

During the past 25 years, 2,847 people have completed the grueling JFK 50, which started long before the jogging craze swept the United States, Sawyer said. Figures for this year would not be available until the last running completed the course late yesterday.

The race goes back to President Roosevelt, who ordered Marines to walk 50 miles in 20 hours over three days to keep in decent shape. Somehow the three-day time period was forgotten when a Marine commandant found Roosevelt's order in 1963 and forwarded it to President Kennedy, who asked at a news conference, "I just wonder how many of our modern Marine officers can do that?"

Soon after, many people in the country, not just Marine officers, were trying to walk, jog or run 50 miles, said Sawyer, who organized the first 50-mile hike March 30, 1963 for members of his Cumberland Valley Athletic Club. They decided to repeat the feat in 1964 and the annual JFK 50 was born.

LAUREL RESULTS, ENTRIES

Alysheba, the world's richest thoroughbred, is led to his morning workout by exercise rider David Oettinger.

Racing fans say good-bye to Alysheba

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) - Racing Alysheba, the world's richest thoroughbred, during a parade at historic Churchill Downs.

Chris McCarron, who rode the colt to victory in the 1987 Kentucky Derby and this year's Breeders' Cup Classic, said he knew Alysheba was an exceptional horse, but "I never dreamed he'd be this good."

"I'm thrilled to be here to get on his back one more time," McCarron said. "I'm going to miss him."

Alysheba paraded in the paddock before the day's seventh race and on the track before the eighth race with cheers and applause from a crowd of 13,841.

fans bade farewell yesterday to Farm in Versailles, telephoned Churchill Downs President Tom Meeker on Nov. 12 to inform Meeker that Alysheba was being retired and to ask if the track would be interested in parading Alysheba.

> Dorothy and Pamela Scharbauer's 4-year-old bay son of Alydar, who earned $6,679,242 to surpass John Henry's $6,597,947 as tops in racing, will go to stallion duty at Lane's End. There, Alysheba will stand for a $75,000 stud fee, according to a Churchill Downs news release.

"People love being close to this horse, and Alysheba loves being the center of attention," Hall of Fame trainer Jack Van Berg said before

Will Farish, owner of Lane's End Saturday's parade. "By parading him in the paddock and on the track, we'll give his fans a chance to take pictures and to see him up close one last time."

Alysheba, winner of 11 races in 28 starts, took the earnings lead by winning the $3 million Classic at Churchill Downs on Nov. 5.

He was bred in Kentucky by Preston Madden and out of the multiple stakes-winning producer Bel Sheba, by Lt. Stevens.

Alysheba's only two appearances at Churchill Downs were in the Derby and the Classic.

Among the 12 other stallions at Lane's End are 1985 Kentucky Derby winner Spend a Buck and 1997 Arlington Million winner Manila.

Kergyma wins feature

Kerygma saved ground along the rail all the way and splashed to a length and one-half victory in the $100,000 Straight Deal Handicap at Laurel yesterday.

The 4-year-old filly registered her sixth and richest stakes victory of the year for owner-breeder D. Earl Pardue of Burlington, N.C. by completing seven furlongs in 1:25 1/5 over a sloppy track with Allen Stacy. Dessa, who shadowed the winner the entire race, finished a length and one-half back in second and Nasty Affair was another length and onehalf behind in third.

Cagey Exuberance, the 122-pound topweight and 7-5 favorite in the field of seven fillies and mares, never got untracked and finished fifth.

Kerygma earned $65,000 to increase her career bankroll to $438,-706. Sondra Bender's Snow King, winner of the All Maryland Nursery on Maryland Million day, returns to the main track at Laurel today as the favorite in the $60,000 Devil's Bag Stakes.
