10-mile race a special event

The Annapolis Ten-Mile Run has grown from a small road race to a huge event that affects all of Annapolis and its environs. On Sunday morning, the run will be staged once again on the streets and roads in and around Annapolis.

As the City of Annapolis and Anne Arundel County prepare for Sunday's 21st edition of its 10-mile run, we are sure to hear some of the usual complaints from people who will have to leave home a few minutes earlier or take a different route to get to church or to breakfast or to their boat. The same complaints have been proffered by the same people year after year. Take them with a grain of salt.

The event that started with five friends responding to a challenge to run from Severna Park High School to City Dock brings in thousands of runners from out of the area to fill many hotel and motel rooms and take up seats in so many of our restaurants.

There is also a very active running community locally. The local runners, almost all of them members of the Annapolis Striders, handle all the preparations for the run as well as the vast array of race-day duties that must be addressed.

While the runners get the spotlight, as well they should, they represent just a fraction of the people involved in making sure the race actually goes off. It's a huge undertaking that necessitates the coordination of city and county police and rescue units as well as other departments in the two governments. There is also Naval Academy, which allows the course to run through it. And the Naval Academy Athletic Association, which allows the use of the stadium and its grounds.

That behind-the-scenes participation is the heart and soul of the event that ranks as one of the biggest sports events — other than Navy football games — that takes place in the area.

The event is put on by the Annapolis Striders running club and nearly every member of the organization is too busy to participate in the event itself. In addition to the meet director, the event coordinators and the many committee heads there are literally hundreds of workers monitoring the course, working the water stations and the finish area.

This run has even kept up with the technological revolution and, for several years now, has tracked the placement of its finishers with computers that print out the results while being manned by a team made up mostly of Striders' members.

There are people who mark the course before the race. And others who clean up after it. There are people with the difficult task of setting up the start and finish areas. (See GROSS, Page B5)

Chili Davis' homer was the only run the Angeles needed last night against the Orioles.

Boskie bests Birds, Wells

By JOE GROSS

BALTIMORE — David Wells was last night against the California Angels. But that wasn't quite good enough to win a pitcher's duel against Shawn Boskie.

California's Chili Davis hit Wells' first pitch of the second inning over the scoreboard. That was ruinous for Wells, who eventually left the game in the ninth after giving up an almost identical blast by Jim Edmonds, the first left-handed hitter to homer off Wells this season, leading off the ninth.

Those two solo homers gave the Angels a 2-0 victory over the Orioles, who are 2-2 on the current homestand and continue to tread water in their attempts to get into American League playoff contention.

The Orioles were shut out for the fifth time this season and the fourth time at Oriole Park.

Wells (9-12), deserved a better fate on a night when he struck out six, didn't issue a base on balls and made a couple of fielding plays that would, on another night, have been highlight reel material. But with his teammates unable to support him with their bats, Wells suffered his second straight loss. He has not won in his last four starts. Even in losing, he lowered his ERA from 4.98 to 4.84.

"I had command of everything. I moved the ball around. And I got out of some jams," said the bewildered Wells. "It was a good feeling to pitch so well after the last couple of times out."

"The home runs, especially the first one to Davis, was what is becoming known as the Camden Special. The pitch was a good one; about off the plate by an inch or so, but he got the ball up there."

"This place is a pitcher's nightmare," Wells added.

Outlook: The red-hot Orioles, who have played themselves back into contention for the divisional title, continue their three-game weekend set against Angels. The Orioles still trail first-place New York by six games.

The Orioles played with Davey Johnson back at the helm. The manager had been hospitalized with an irregular heartbeat on Thursday and missed that night's game.

"I think the difference was that we didn't get the ball into play when we had the opportunity," Johnson said quietly. "What can I say about Wells? He pitched a dang good ball game; good enough to win."

Even his counterpart said that Wells deserved to get the victory last night, noting that the Orioles lefty pitched a great game aside from one or two pitches.

"The thing is that I've been on that side of some decisions too and it's little consolation knowing that you did a good job but didn't get the win," Boskie said. "I was satisfied with the game I pitched tonight."

The right-handed Boskie is now 3-0 this season against the Orioles and 4-1 with a 2.12 ERA in his career against Baltimore.

He was plenty good enough to get the victory last night, boosting his (See PITCH, Page B3)

Ravens impress in rout

Stover has 3 field goals, Lewis adds TD return

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The Baltimore Ravens played like they're ready for the regular season while the Buffalo Bills looked like they need more practice. Both are happy the preseason is history.

The Ravens scored 30 straight points in the first three quarters en route to a 37-14 victory over the Bills in an exhibition finale last night. Baltimore already was thinking about the Oakland Raiders, its first opponent in the regular season opener.

"We wanted to finish the preseason strong and on a high note, and we did that," Ravens coach Ted Marchibroda said. "I told our guys to come back Monday ready for war because everything changes Monday. It's a whole different ball game."

Ravens return specialist Jermaine Lewis needed less than 10 seconds to provide the game's stand-out play, going 83 yards on a punt return to give Baltimore a 17-0 lead in the second quarter.

Vinny Testaverde completed six of 11 passes for 96 yards and a 14-yard touchdown to Michael Jackson before heading to the sidelines with 4:34 remaining in the second quarter.

Earnest Hunter scored on an 8-yard run, and Matt Stover had field goals of 39, 26, and 47 yards. Derrick Cullors added a 3-yard TD run in the fourth quarter. Baltimore also had seven sacks.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly played only two series — both ugly — before leaving the game in the first quarter.

The Bills' starting quarterback, who engineered three scoring drives in five series going into the game, had just six plays and no completions in three attempts during his final tuneup.

Kelly had one pass nearly picked off, and he was sacked by Dan Footman for 10 yards before giving way to Todd Collins. The rest of the team wasn't much better.

"It wasn't pretty," Buffalo coach

Marv Levy said. "We're not proud of our performance. We're frustrated with the way we played."

Alex Van Pelt directed an 80-yard drive that ended with his 4-yard touchdown pass to fullback Jason Bratton. Van Pelt added a 9-yard TD pass to Chris Brantley with 3:29 left in the game. He was nine of 17 for 83 yards and the two TDs. Collins finished 10 of 16 for 97 yards.

Bills running back Thurman Thomas sat out the game to make sure he would be healthy for the season opener against the New York Giants. Defensive end Bruce Smith was sidelined with fluid on his knee.

Buffalo had 18 yards offense before Collins hit Brantley with a 50-yard pass along the sideline with just over seven minutes left in the third quarter.

"Of course we'd like to win the game, but it all starts next week," Bills receiver Andre Reed said. "We wanted to get the guys that play out of the game unscathed."

Frerotte looks good, 'Skins don't

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Curtis Martin scored two touchdowns and gained 56 of his 61 yards in the first quarter last night as the New England Patriots beat Washington 27-19 despite a strong performance by newly anointed Redskins starting quarterback Gus Frerotte.

Frerotte, the 197th player selected in the 1994 draft, was given the starting job this week over Heath Shuler, who was taken third overall that year. Playing the first half, Frerotte completed 8 of 15 passes for 185 yards, including a 62-yard touchdown pass to Leslie Shepherd.

A driving thunderstorm soaked the field and kept 12,050 fans away but it passed over early, long before Shuler came on to start the second half. He was 9-of-24 for 100 yards but threw a twice-tipped interception by Alcides Catanho with 1:48 left after the Redskins converted an onside kick to get one last chance to win.

In the competition for Patriots backup quarterback, Jay Barker started the second half and was 5-of-11 for 81 yards. Maryland grad Scott Zolak, thought to have the edge over Barker, was 5-of-9 for 28 yards, including a scrambling 5-yard touchdown pass to give New England a 27-16 lead.

Drew Bledsoe, competing for nothing at all, was 11-of-18 in the first half for 126 yards, one touchdown and one interception. Although he was holding his left, non-throwing, elbow late in the first half and had it packed in ice in the second, there was no announcement on an injury.

The Patriots finished the exhibition season 3-1 and lifted coach Bill Parcells' career preseason record to 35-14. The Redskins were 1-3 for the third consecutive year. It was the fifth time in six years they won just one preseason game.

Frerotte started off well, connecting with Shepherd to make it 7-0 on the first play of Washington's second drive. Shepherd, who was in the starting lineup because of Michael Westbrook's knee injury, left early in the second quarter with a left knee injury but X-rays were negative.

New England evened it behind Martin, who ran seven times on the drive and finished it off from the 1 yard-line with 2:48 to go in the quarter. When Washington got the ball back, Frerotte was hit by Willie McGinest as he was passing, and he threw it right to New England linebacker Monty Brown. The Patriots took over at the Redskins 21 and scored again on a 1-yard run by Martin.

Adam Vinatieri, who won New England's kicking job from Matt Bahr, had his extra point attempt blocked by Marc Boutte, leaving the score 13-7. The Redskins marched to the 1 but moved back with a false start and an offensive pass interference penalty, forcing them to settle for Eddie Murray's 25-yard field goal that made it 13-10.

On New England's next possession, Bledsoe hit Wil Moore for 37 yards to the Redskins 11, then connected with Sam Gash in the flat and he stayed inbounds just long enough to cross the goal line and make it 20-10.

Murray, who's competing for a job with Scott Blanton, missed a 44-yarder with 37 seconds left in the first half.

Only name is same for Harlem, Wizards

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The president of the Harlem Wizards, who is attempting to keep the Washington Bullets from becoming the Washington Wizards, testified yesterday that his traveling basketball troupe has used the name for decades.

But under questioning from a lawyer for the Bullets and the NBA, Todd Davis conceded there are big differences between league games and the events featuring his Wizards, who have called themselves the "Avis of comedy basketball."

Testimony could conclude next week. U.S. District Judge William H. Walls, who is conducting the bench trial on whether to bar the Bullets from becoming Wizards, has not said when he will rule.

The Wizards, who were never based in Harlem, was founded about 1960 by his late father, Howie Davis, who originally called it the New York Harlem Wizards. The team's headquarters is in North Bergen, N.J.

Bullets owner Abe Pollin announced the new name Feb. 22, reiterating that it was needed because of the violent connotation of Bullets and Washington's high murder rate.

Davis made efforts to trademark Wizards and Harlem Wizards in February, both before and after Pollin's announcement, he testified.

Davis resisted attempts during cross examination at describing the Wizards' performance as "comedy basketball," despite being shown promotional materials and correspondence that used the phrase.

Reading that "Wizard shenanigans" include pulling down the socks of their opponents, starting them by handing them the ball, and using "George the Ref, the world's zaniest referee," lawyer Kenneth Plevan asked, "Would this be the type of basketball played by teams in the NBA?"

"No," responded Davis. Davis maintained that the Wizards mix comedy with competition, generally playing the first and third quarters of a game seriously, while the second and fourth are mainly entertainment.

The Bullets are to become known as the Washington Wizards in the 1997-98 season when the team moves to a new arena.

MAVS ADD FIRST-ROUNDER: First-round draft pick Samaki Walker signed a three-year, $4.3 million deal with Dallas yesterday, continuing new coach Jim Cleamons' offseason tinkering to polish the Mavericks.

"Basically, he's got the right attitude. He's a great athlete, a great basketball player," said owner Ross Perot Jr. "It's another critical piece of the puzzle."

Walker, 20, will be the youngest player in franchise history when the season opens. He said he's looking forward to making the transition to the pros.

"It's going to be a test, but of course it's been a test for everybody that's in this league," he said.

Walker, who is planning to move to Dallas next week, said he has been lifting weights and working out to prepare for the grind of the professional basketball season.

"(I am) just making myself prepared to get ready for this next level," he said.

Woods rolls on at U.S. Amateur

CORNELIUS, Ore. (AP) — A growing sense of inevitability simmered in the sizzling sun at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club yesterday as Tiger Woods moved relentlessly toward his third consecutive U.S. Amateur title.

The question of whether Woods will win is becoming more and more like asking if he will turn professional. Everyone knows the answer. It's all just a matter of time.

For the fourth straight match, Woods toyed with an opponent early then put the hammer down on the holes that bridge the two nines.

The victim in the quarterfinals was D.A. Points, a 19-year-old LSU student. Points was only 1-down after Woods lost his ball in the woods on No. 7. But Woods birdied Nos. 9 and 12, hitting to six feet both times, to go 3-up and closed the match out on No. 16, winning 3-and-2.

Woods is two victories away from becoming the first player to win three consecutive amateur titles — Saturday's semifinals and Sunday's 36-hole final.

Woods plays Stanford teammate Joel Kribel in the semifinals. Kribel was 1-down after Duke Delcher holed out from the fairway for an eagle on No. 17. But Kribel eagled No. 18 to even the match and won on the first sudden-death hole with a birdie.

The other bracket also has teammates squaring off. Robert Floyd, son of Raymond, advanced with a 2-up victory over Brian Novoa. And Steve Scott defeated Buddy Marucci, the man Woods beat in last year's finals, 1-up by winning the last hole in the other quarterfinal match.

Floyd and Scott both play for the University of Florida.

"I think it says a lot about those two teams," Floyd said. "We tried to get them to break it up so teammates wouldn't have to play teammates, but the USGA wouldn't go for it," Floyd joked.

Woods, for so many years the Wunderkind of golf, finds himself the old man in the semifinals. He turns 21 in December, while Floyd turned 20 earlier this year and Kribel and Scott are both 19.

It was the 16th consecutive victory for Woods in U.S. Amateur play, one off the record by Harvie Ward in the late 1950s.

GOLF ROUNDUP

Asked if he was playing better than ever, Woods said: "There's a simple answer to that — yes.

"Every amateur so far I've gotten better."

Woods is clearly on a plateau no other amateur can touch.

It was already almost 90 degrees on its way to near 100 when Woods and Points walked to the first tee shortly after 10:30. Even Points applauded when Woods was introduced, as if realizing it was all a matter of time.

Woods drove with his 2-iron as he has all week on the hole but this time played it down the right side of the fairway with a high fade instead of the low draw left he hit in his previous matches.

"Perfect line to the pin," he said to his caddy, Bryon Bell.

BOSTON SENIOR: Defending champion Isao Aoki, who offset an opening bogey with five front-nine birdies, and Larry Ziegler, who birdied his last two holes, shot 67s yesterday and were tied for the first-round lead of the $300,000 Bank of Boston Senior PGA Classic.

Raymond Floyd, Frank Conner, Ben Smith and Tom Wargo each had 4-under 68s on the 6,775-yard Nashawtic Country Club course and there was a 10-way jam at 69.

Aoki, who has won two of six career Senior PGA Tour this year, bogeyed the opening par-3 before making birdies on five of the next eight holes and requiring just 12 putts on the front nine.

"It wasn't pretty, but it was 67," Ziegler said. "It will be a struggle the next two days. I know it."

PGA WORLD SERIES: Heavy rain and lightning suspended yesterday's second round of the World Series of Golf with most of the field still on the course.

Defending champion Greg Norman, starting the day four shots off the pace, birdied four of the first six holes to jump into contention before the elements ended his round on No. 9.

Paul Goydos and Billy Mayfair,

Tiger Woods moved relentlessly toward his third consecutive U.S. Amateur title yesterday.

the first-round co-leaders along with Hidemichi Tanaka, each had a birdie and a par on their two holes to move to five under and share the lead.

Norman, one shot back along with Tanaka, said the suspension — after an earlier stoppage of more than 3 1/2 hours — wouldn't affect his momentum.

"I'll come out tomorrow, hit it in the middle of the ninth green, make a birdie and keep going," he said.

It was the third straight week that a PGA Tour event has had a round suspended by inclement weather, following the PGA Championship and last week's International.

All but five players in the 43-man field were still on the course when play was suspended. Play will resume this morning for those 38 players, with the third round beginning immediately afterward.

LPGA STAR BANK: Pat Hurst shot a 5-under-par 67 yesterday and held a one-stroke lead over six players after the rain-delayed first round of the Star Bank LPGA Classic.

Hurst was unaware of how she was coming in because the people working the scoreboards at the Country Club of the North in suburban Beaver Creek were sent home during a two-hour rain delay.

"I didn't know I had the lead," Hurst said. "But at the break the leader was four under I was happy with my round."

The group at 68 included Nancy Lopez, Elaine Crosby, Laura Davies, Kelly Robbins, Robin Walton and Marianne Morris.

Unknown Slovakian stuns Chang

COMMACK, N.Y. (AP) — Karol Kucera of Slovakia came up with the biggest victory of his career last night, a 6-4, 6-4 win over top-seeded Michael Chang in the quarterfinals of the Waldbaum Hamlet Cup.

Kucera, ranked 86th in the world, handed the third-ranked Chang his second loss in 18 matches on hard court this summer. The other was to Andre Agassi in the finals at Cincinnati earlier this month.

The loss gives Chang two days to recoup for the U.S. Open, where he is the second seed.

"I hope this won't effect me going into the Open," Chang said. "It's strange, I felt good in the warmup before the match. I hate to have a day like this just before the Open."

TENNIS

With Chang eliminated, fifth-seeded Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine became the only seed to reach the Hamlet Cup semifinals and he will play Kucera.

Adrian Voinea of Romania, who will be defending champion Pete Sampras' first-round opponent in the U.S. Open, also advanced to the semifinals with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-2 victory over Sweden's Thomas Johansson yesterday.

Voinea's semifinal opponent will be Martin Damm of the Czech Republic, a 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 winner over Michael Joyce.

Chang double-faulted at an inopportune time to lose service in the fifth game and then fell behind 0-4 in the second set.

"I am very happy. I am yelling inside," Kucera, 22, said. "But I knew I could beat Michael."

HAMLET CUP: Fifth-seeded Andrei Medvedev of the Ukraine overcame a strong challenge from unseeded Jonathan Stark for a 7-6 (7-4), 6-3 quarterfinal victory yesterday in the Waldbaum Hamlet Cup.

Medvedev, who will face the winner of last night's Michael Chang-Karol Kucera match in tonight's semifinals, broke open his tight duel with Stark by taking a 3-0 lead with two service breaks in the final set.

Adrian Voinea of Romania, who will be defending champion Pete Sampras' first-round opponent in the U.S. Open next week, also advanced to the semifinals with a 7-6 (7-4), 6-2 victory over Sweden's Thomas Johansson yesterday.
