Scores sizzling in Crofton

Setting the pace at the CROFTON BOWLING CENTRE for the ladies last week were a sizzling 237 game and 651 series by Cynthia Sook-Rohlfis and a standout 235 single and 622 mark in three by Cathy Warboy.

The scores highlighted the pre-holiday play. Cathy Hough topped the field in a single with a top drawer 244, which led to a highly respectable 595 outing for a series.

Also showing to advantage in the waning days of the year were games in the 200s by Lee Fisher, Brenda Miller and Willie Miller, with Willie posting a 570 set. Kay Satterfield gets a nod for a fine 576 in three.

Capturing laurels for the men, in the abbreviated weekend of holiday play were a 265 game by Sib Correia and a sterling 671 series by Tom Simmons. Correia wound up with a standout 684.

Joe Doctor also closed the year auspiciously with a pair of 255 games, one in both leagues, in which he participates and a 649 series. Landed for singles in the 250s are Jeff Lamrouex, Tim Hartman, Bob Damarico, Don Randall, with Matt Novoty cited for a 253 game and 655 set. John Stringer gets a nod for his fine 654 series.

Games in the 240s were rolled by Chuck Eaton, Felix Lamrouex, Mike Kessler, Bobby Shuyler and Ed Neubert.

Brunswick ramp earns top ranking

By TOM GOODSPEED
Capital Outdoors Writer

I would have to rate the Brunswick Potomac River Ramp right up there with any other regional boat ramp I've ever used.

That is because it offers access to some of the best smallmouth bass fishing to be found in the state. The town of Brunswick is just downstream from Harpers Ferry, down below the tiny waterfront village of Knoxville, on Rt. 478.

To reach the ramp from Annapolis, drive around Washington on Rt. 495 towards Frederick on Rt. 270, veer left of Frederick onto Rt. 70 and immediately leave Rt. 70 at the Rt. 340 exit to the right. This then swings around beneath Rt. 70 and heads on down towards the river.

The last exit before you reach the river is Rt. 478 and this passes through Knoxville and takes you to Brunswick. You'll then turn right beyond Rt. 287, in the center of town and drive down across the railroad tracks and wind around until you cross the canal and reach the ramp. The canal and ramp are in the C & O Canal National Historic Park as the ramp is virtually beneath the 1,287 bridge across the river.

It's not a great ramp but it there and that is what counts.

I run a 14-foot V-bottom tin boat with a 15 hp outboard (equipped with a pitch fork rock guard) here and never have had any trouble. It's water for an 18-foot bass boat though.

Bonanza of spot topped '92 fishing

ROD AND GUN

Pimple in one-foot jigs was the way to go.

The No. 10 Pimple is a great flounder lure. I caught a dozen kinds of game fish with a Pimple during the summer. It is primarily a jigging lure, but it can take fish when trolled or cast, and it casts like a bullet.

One thing for sure about our 1992 bay fishing was that we have a great supply of toadfish (brown trout) in the bay. If we could just find some way to get people to eat them, fishing would have no problems as a sport.

Hardheads or croakers did make a better showing last summer with about one in every three being of keeper size, 10 inches long, but we did not have a blowfish run as the government predicted. These ugly fish that blow up when you scratch their bellies, fight like a rubber ball but are simply delightful to eat when you fry the tails that have only one bone to deal with. I call the Shmoos, like the funnies.

The Virginia Saltwater Fishing Tournament, which includes Chesapeake Bay and has free entry for varieties of game fish in 1992, has 2244 entries that qualified for citations. Of these fish, 994 — 44 percent — were released to fight again another day.

Amberjack led in the number VSFT entries with 473 meeting the minimum size requirements. About 94 percent were released. Second entries were white marlin (2899 percent released) and third were speckled trout (260).

Striders say thanks with run

On the first Saturday of December, 1978, a handful of Annapolis running enthusiasts met in the office of John Butterfield and decided to start a running club.

They called themselves the Annapolis Striders, and elected to hold a general meeting to gauge the public's interest in such an organization.

They could not have predicted a more overwhelming response. Within a year, the membership rolls included more than 500 county residents, and the club had hosted a number of races, including the now-famous Annapolis 10-Mile Run.

At the end of that first year, in December of 1979, the Striders decided to hold a race to commemorate their success. They called it the Annapolis Striders Anniversary Run, and entrance was free to club members, more of a "thank-you" race than a fund-raiser.

"It was a good way to say 'thank-you' and signify our success as a serious running club," said Richard Hillman, former Annapolis mayor and one of the half-dozen founding members of the club.

Fourteen years later, the anniversary run is still free to Striders who enter in advance of race day.

And when the gun sounds at 10 a.m. on Saturday, signifying the start of the 14th annual Annapolis Striders 15K Anniversary Run, a field of about 125 runners will once again enjoy the efforts of dozens of club volunteers.

Held for many years at the Naval Academy, the anniversary run was moved three years ago to Quiet Waters Park in Hillsmere.

Essentially, the 9.3-mile course follows the perimeter trails of the park, with each runner completing two laps, said Tony Pruner, this year's race director.

Already, 60 people have pre-registered for the race; another 60-plus are expected to register on race day, he said.

"It all depends on the weather," he said.

Registration will be held on Saturday from 8:30 to 9:45 a.m., with the runners sendoff at 10. An awards ceremony will be held at 11:30 a.m.

Admission fees on race day are $3 for club members; $4 for nonmembers. T-shirts will be offered for sale.

This year, the race is being sponsored by the newly opened Golitti's Deli, as well as its parent restaurant, La Piccola Roma in downtown Annapolis. The two restaurants have donated prizes for the winners, but Pruner wouldn't divulge what those prizes might be.

The anniversary run is also the final race in the Club Championship Series. Last year, nine men and one woman completed all 10 races in the series, which include the 16-mile Metric Marathon and the Cold Turkey 20K Run.

Of course, Pruner is still recruiting volunteers for Saturday's race, to man the water stops, hand out refreshments at the end and call out splits.

Anyone wishing to volunteer should call Tony or Ludmila Pruner at 757-2216.
