McCormack 'breezes' in run Navy cross country assistant wins 11th Annapolis Run

By JOE GROSS
Associate Sports Editor

Bill McCormack's first competition of the season wasn't all he hoped it might be, but the Naval Academy assistant cross country coach was still satisfied.

McCormack won the 11th edition of the Annapolis Run yesterday, completing the 10-mile course in 50:27, well off the course record of 48:42 established in 1982 by Gary Striano.

"It was windier than I would have liked," McCormack said after crossing the finish line in Navy Marine Corps Memorial Stadium ahead of nearly 2,600 runners.

"I would have liked to be under 50 minutes, but I'll take the win," McCormack said.

Only the gusty breezes spoiled an otherwise perfect morning for running. Nearly all of the runners credited the wind with keeping them from setting personal best times.

McCormack noted that he and Gerry Clapper of Columbia, one of the pre-race favorites with McCormack, and third-place finisher Jim Hage, ran together for the first part of the race.

"After the turnaround (approximately 6.5 miles into the run) I opened a lead of five to 10 yards on Gerry," McCormack said. "Then I pushed the uphill on the comeback and increased the lead."

McCormack finished 33 seconds ahead of the second-place Clapper. The first woman finisher was Patty McGovern of the Washington Running Club, who clocked 57:08, 3:23 ahead of the second woman, Marge Rosasco of Baltimore.

"This was an outstanding race," Dr. Robert Verklín of the Annapolis Sports Medicine Clinic said. "We (the medical staff on hand) had almost nothing to do, which is rare for an event like this. We treated a few bee stings, some sore muscles and a few blisters, but that's all."

Dr. Victor Plavner, another of the group of doctors working the race, noted that the weather conditions were largely responsible for the runners' lack of problems.

"We were blessed with another beautiful day for the run," Ron Jarashow of the race committee said as he watched the runners stream across the finish line. "It's amazing how we always seem to have such good weather for this run."

The last of the runners finished two hours and seven minutes after John Wall of the sponsoring Annapolis Striders fired the starting gun.

Moore shuts door, 4-3

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BALTIMORE — For a split second, Donnie Moore thought he might experience a rerun of his last disastrous outing.

But after yielding a run-scoring pinch single to John Shelby with two outs in the ninth inning, the California relief ace fanned Fred Lynn and preserved a 4-3 victory for the Angels over the Baltimore Orioles yesterday.

Moore, shelled when the Orioles rallied for five runs in the eighth inning to Friday night's game, notched his 16th save in relief of Kirk McCaskill, 14-7.

McCaskill fanned eight and walked five while pitching with a blister on the middle finger of his pitching hand. He was lifted after he issued a two-out walk to Juan Beniquez and John Stefero followed with a pinch single.

Moore confessed he had a flashback of Friday's game when Shelby's pinch single went past his legs and into centerfield.

"But you have to block that out, especially when you see Fred Lynn coming to the plate," Moore said. "I'd better, or I wouldn't be able to pitch the rest of the year."

"I'm not 100 percent, and I probably won't be for the rest of the year," said Moore, who has been bothered by shoulder problems. But if I get rest, I can go two or three innings."

The Angels scored their final two runs after Baltimore mistakes.

Bob Boone singled in the Angels' third run following a botched Baltimore rundown play in the second and Dick Schofield scored California's final run on a wild pitch in the seventh.

Murray requests a trade

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON — Eddie Murray, the cornerstone of Baltimore's offense for the past 10 years, has requested that the Orioles trade him.

The 30-year-old Gold Glove first baseman asked for a trade at a meeting with Orioles General Manager Hank Peters on Friday. The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

"There'll be no public statements on anything regarding Eddie," a surprised Peters told the Post. "He's still a member of the Baltimore Orioles."

Both Peters and Murray refused comment, but neither would deny that Murray had asked to be traded.

A source close to Murray told the Baltimore Sun that Murray's agent Ron Shapiro was expected to speak with Murray today "to figure out what's going on." When reached by The Sun in New Jersey late Sunday, Shapiro declined to comment.

With a little more than a month to go in the season, the Orioles stand fifth in the American League East, eight games behind first-place Boston.

Report: Driesell faces suspension if he is indicted

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
BALTIMORE — Should University of Maryland head basketball Coach Lefty Driesell be indicted by a grand jury looking into the drug-related death Len Bias, an assistant coach would take his place at least temporarily, according to a published report.

The Baltimore Sun, in yesterday's editions, said university officials have been considering a plan to suspend Driesell, if he is indicted. The newspaper reported sources said a suspension would be in effect until the charges were resolved.

Prince George's County Prosecutor Arthur A. Marshall Jr. said before the grand jury proceedings began that he wanted to question Driesell about what he told members of the Maryland basketball team at a meeting called just hours after Bias died June 19.

Marshall said he would consider recommending the indictment of Driesell on obstruction of justice charges if the grand jury found evidence that the coach advised his players to remove any evidence or refused to cooperate with police handling the investigation.

Driesell has denied that he gave any such advice.

Driesell testified last week before the Prince George's County grand jury investigating the basketball star's death, but declined any comment on his testimony.

He reportedly waived immunity from prosecution against the advice of his lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams.

... has testified

While university officials have supported Driesell publicly and privately, they are expected to ask one of his assistants, Ron Bradley or Oliver Purnell, to fill the head coaching job if an indictment against Driesell was returned.

The grand jury already has handed up indictments lodging drug-related charges against Bias' close friend Brian Tribble and teammates Terry Long and David Gregg, who all were with Bias when he died of cocaine intoxication.

Marshall has said other indictments probably will be returned for perjury and obstruction of justice.

Williams impressive in Redskin debut

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
TAMPA, Fla. — By the middle of the third quarter, the crowd at Tampa Stadium began to chant "We want Doug. We want Doug." Before long, ex-Tampa Bay Buccaneers quarterback Doug Williams entered the game for the Washington Redskins and proceeded to pick his former teammates apart.

"When you put that helmet on, you try to block out everything. Unfortunately, I can hear pretty good," Williams said after the Redskins defeated the Bucs 21-13 in a National Football League preseason game Saturday night.

"I didn't look around to see who was saying 'yassay' and who was saying, 'day,' he added. "I know they were there to see if Doug Williams could still play."

After completing 13 of 17 passes for 84 yards and directing Washington's final touchdown drive, the 31-year-old quarterback answered the question about whether he has a future in the NFL after spending the past three years in the United States Football League.

"I'd be lying if I said I don't feel good about how I did out there tonight. It was a big thing for me," said Williams, who was greeted at the 2:28 mark of the third quarter by a mixture of boos and cheers from a crowd of 45,136. "I honestly believe a lot of people in America were praying for me to do well."

Williams, who started 67 games for the Bucs between 1978 and 1982, left Tampa Bay for the USFL after a bitter contract dispute three years ago. He led the Bucs to the playoffs three times in his five seasons here, but Tampa Bay's record since his departure is 10-38.

"I didn't have anything to prove. I had mixed emotions coming back, and I think the crowd did too," Williams said. "But I told Coach (Joe) Gibbs 'don't worry about me.'"

Before the game, Gibbs had said he would have preferred Williams not make his debut with the Redskins against the Bucs. With the start of the regular season only two weeks away, however, he had little choice.

Afterward, he obviously was more than pleased with the way Williams handled the Tampa Bay defense — picking it apart with short, high-percentage passes, none of which covered more than 14 yards.

"You're never quite sure after a player has had a long layoff, but I think Doug looked calm and relaxed out there," Gibbs said. "He only had a couple of practices, and I think it ting .303 with 12 homers and 60 runs batted in.

A source high in the Orioles' front office told the Post Murray's five-year, $12.7 million contract, which begins next season, makes him almost impossible to trade.

Sources close to Murray have said he is upset with the way his medical problems have been handled this season.

"He heard some things like, 'How's your vacation?' a player told the Post. 'You don't know how much that burns him up, and he believed it was coming from management,'" the player said.

Murray was placed on the disabled list earlier this season for the first time in his 10-year career. He had pulled a hamstring, then reinjured it while testing the leg's strength on a Cybex machine.

When Murray was placed on the disabled list the Orioles recalled first baseman Jim Traber from Rochester and Traber went on a home run tear, becoming a favorite of the fans.

When Murray told the club he was ready to get back on the field, he was instructed to wait an additional 48 hours.

Murray, who before this season became the Orioles' first-ever captain, also has been booed at least twice at Memorial Stadium this season. According to his friends on the team, he's also upset by comments callers to nightly sports talk shows in Baltimore have made about whether he should be traded.

O's don't gain ground

Ruppert Jones opened the second with a single and was trapped off second after overrunning the bag on a sacrifice bunt by Schofield.

But Jones was struck in the back by shortstop Cal Ripken's throw, reached third safely and scored on Boone's single, making it 3-1. It was only the second error in 50 games for Ripken.

Baltimore reliever Tony Arnold pitched hitless ball for 4 1-3 innings before being lifted following singles by Schofield and Boone to open the seventh.

Brad Havens fanned Gary Pettis, who had two previous doubles, by then threw a pitch to the backstop, bringing Schofield home.

McCaskill was charged with the third run, though it scored on a single by John Shelby against Moore.

Pettis doubled to open the game and scored on a single by Wally Joyner. Two more singles by Reggie Jackson and Doug DeCinces made it

2-0. Baltimore starter Storm Davis, 9-11, allowed seven hits before he departed with one out in the second, following Pettis' second double.
